r/interviews • 10mo ago
u/averagecsegirl

Microsoft Cloud Solution Architect Interview Prep

Hi guys!

I have my CSA technical interview in 24hrs and still not sure if I feel confident enough.

This role is needs a minimum of 1 years worth of experience so I don't think it'll be too crazy, but what kind of questions would be there? Both technical and behavioural (as I have a feeling it'll be a mix of both)

I'm currently apart of a company that has their own version of Azure, so would they ask me questions based on my experience here?

Any tips helps, thanks guys!

3 13 21

CommBank • Ad

How much could you borrow? Start your home buying journey with the CommBank Borrowing Power Calculator.

Learn More commbank.com.au

Join the conversation

Sort by: Best

Search Comments

Ok_Following_5727 • 10mo ago

Expect scenario-based questions: customer wants X ->how do you design it, why PaaS vs IaaS, basic networking/security/cost trade-offs. Talk through your reasoning out loud.

If they don't know something: say it. Be honest, then explain how you'd find the answer or who you'd involve. That's actually a plus.

They will use your current experience as context, but they're testing principles, not exact Azure implementations.

Just be at ease and be yourself. Consider it as a conversation instead of an interview. You will be fine!

1 Reply Award Share

Last-Fennel-5953 • 10mo ago

This is solid advice right here. The "I don't know but here's how I'd figure it out" approach has literally saved me in interviews before - shows you're not just BSing your way through

Also def practice explaining your thought process out loud beforehand, it feels weird at first but makes a huge difference when you're actually in there

2 Reply Award Share

Accomplished-Win9630 • 10mo ago

24 hours is tight but you can still prep. They'll definitely ask about your current Azure-like experience and how it translates to actual Azure services.

Honestly, I'd recommend doing some mock interviews to get your nerves settled. I tried Final Round AI's mock interview feature when I was stressed about technical rounds and it really helped me practice explaining complex concepts clearly.

For CSA roles they love scenario-based questions like "how would you migrate X workload" so brush up on migration strategies and cost optimization.

1 Reply Award Share

revarta • 10mo ago

r/interviews

Join

Job Interviews

A subreddit dedicated to job interviews.

Created Jun 14, 2008

Public

346K Weekly visitors

5.5K Weekly contributions

R/INTERVIEWS RULES

1 No job advertisements

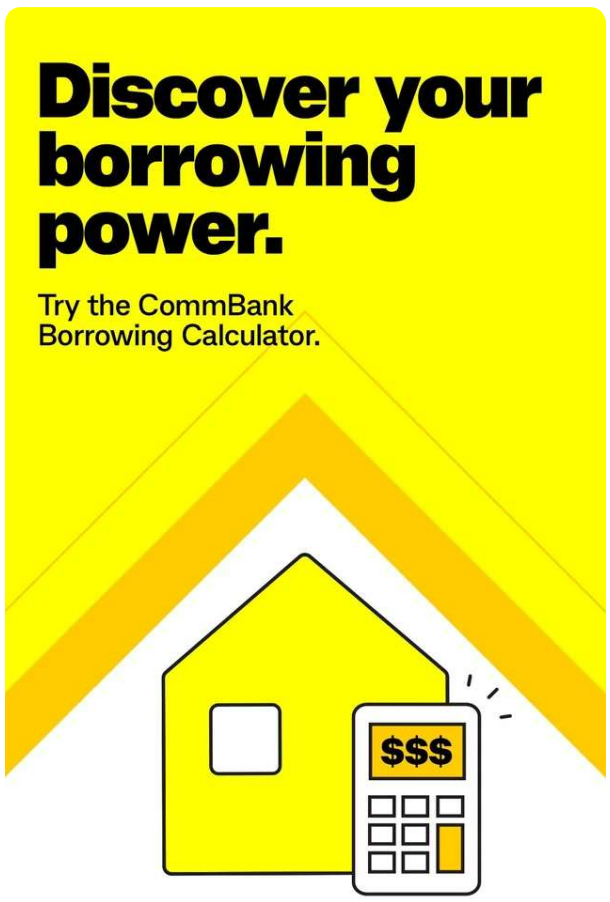

2 No advertising

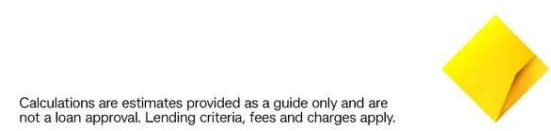

3 No resume critiques

4 General conduct

5 Post titles must be specific

AD

MODERATORS

Message Mods

u/jack_attack89

u/AdorablePandaBaby

View all moderators

AD

On the behavioral side, use the STAR approach to detail situations, actions, and outcomes from your experience. Given your background, they might dig into how you handled specific challenges in your company's Azure-like environment, especially re: scalability or security. Focus on how your experience translates to Azure environments—interviewers love transferable skills. Good luck!

1 Reply Award Share ···

wolverine25_12 • 6mo ago

I have a Microsoft "Cloud Solutions Architect - Security" technical interview on Friday, that's two days away. What should I focus on? During round one, the hiring manager hinted the team is focused on Defender for Cloud and Sentinel. Do you think I should focus more on these or just be broad and any other thoughts are welcomed

1 Reply Award Share ···

Apprehensive_Bug6898 • 6mo ago

I have an interview for the same position, can you please tell share what's your background and what questions were asked

1 Reply Award Share ···

wolverine25_12 • 6mo ago

Background is in systems engineering and InfoSec. The technical round was pretty quick and wasn't too technical but basic security and technical controls implemented in the past. Signed NDA so I can't divulge any more info, sorry. Good luck with yours and left me know if you get response from them. I've been done for two weeks now and still waiting.

1 Reply Award Share ···

Bright_Walk_7819 • 3mo ago

Hey!! so did you receive any response from them yet or not because I gave mine last week

1 Reply Award Share ···

wolverine25_12 • 3mo ago

Yes I finally did but didn't go as planned. Get your tech interview prep going and Microsoft culture. Those are the two big ones.

1 Reply Award Share ···

Green-Blackberry-123 • 4mo ago

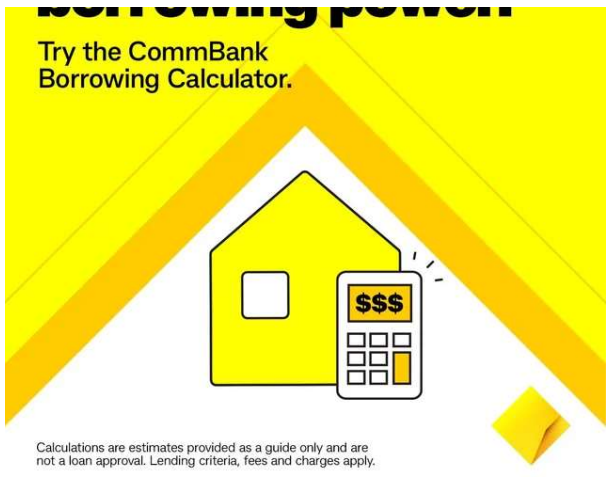

Hey I have CSA interview at Microsoft, can you please suggest what to prepare?

1 Reply Award Share ···

Known_Cry_9985 • 3mo ago

Did you finish your interview

1 Reply Award Share ···

Reddit Rules Privacy Policy User Agreement Accessibility
OSA Information Reddit, Inc. © 2026. All rights reserved.